

Presuppositions: The Failure of Higher Education (During Scenario)

Thumbnail image: Black screen with white text reading "Presuppositions: The Failure of Higher Education (During Scenario)"

Video: Opening title card displays on black screen with white text: "Presuppositions: The Failure of Higher Education (During Scenario)." Camera reveals the same stage setting with the same five performers, but their actions have changed to depict the unsavoury state of higher education in the current moment.

Video: Stage setup shows the same five performers in their previous positions, but now engaged in different activities. The admin stands left of screen, smugly counting money with a self-satisfied expression. Camera closes in on what was once the eager student, now distracted and scrolling on her phone instead of participating in class.

Video: Camera moves to focus on the professor, who continues teaching but now waves a pride flag, suggesting ideological indoctrination rather than pure academic instruction. The lens shifts to the student on the stool, who still holds a book on Shakespeare but the book is upside down and she is vaping, showing disengagement from learning.

Video: Camera moves to the student with the computer, revealing she is online shopping rather than engaging with educational content. The camera then closes in again on the admin, emphasizing his continued focus on counting large amounts of money.

Video: Final shot pans out to capture the entire tableau once more, showing the complete transformation from engaged learning to dysfunction, distraction, and corporatization of Higher Ed.
